Uptown Art Fair Returns to Minneapolis with Vibrant Celebration

Uptown Minneapolis, MN – The Uptown Art Fair, one of Minneapolis's most beloved cultural events, is back in its historic Uptown neighborhood, promising an unforgettable celebration of art, music, and community. The Uptown Association, along with Mayor Jacob Frey and Executive Director Stefani Pennaz, are thrilled to welcome residents and visitors to the iconic fair.

"I am proud to announce, along with the Uptown Association here, that the Uptown Art Fair is coming back," said Mayor Frey.

Stefani Pennaz, Executive Director of the Uptown Association, shared her excitement:

"We are thrilled to bring the Uptown Art Fair back to its namesake neighborhood. This event is a celebration of creativity, community, and the vibrant energy that makes Uptown so special. We can't wait to see the streets filled with art, live music, and smiling faces from across the city."

The Uptown Art Fair draws more than 300,000 attendees and showcases hundreds of local and national artists. Attendees can experience interactive art installations, live music performances, food from local restaurants, and family-friendly activities throughout the weekend.

This year's return promises to reinvigorate Uptown as a cultural hub, connecting artists, businesses, and community members in a dynamic celebration of creativity.
